If you go by the philosophy of "live to eat", then here's our pick of five food and beverage-related activities in Singapore you would want to mark in your diary.

Learn to bake and cook like a pro with Dean Brettschneider

Improve your bread baking and culinary skills at the newly launched Brettschneider's Baking and Cooking School by Dean Brettschneider, founder of Baker & Cook artisan bakeries. Located in the quiet neighbourhood of Hillcrest in Bukit Timah, the modern, light-filled kitchen is kitted out in state-of-the-art equipment. Other well-known local chefs such as Eric Neo, executive chef at InterContinental Hotel and rising pastry chef Joe Leong will also conduct workshops.

Kill two birds with one stone by booking a dinner at this newly launched dining option that lets you go on a ride through the city while enjoying a sumptuous meal. The Gourmet Bus is one of those concepts that works well in a city like Singapore that presents a completely different view at night. Admire the lit up landmarks as well as the carefully crafted menu.

Find out how to brew a good cuppa at The Singapore Coffee Festival

Learn to brew like a barista and sample top coffee roasts from around the world at Singapore's first coffee festival. Happening at the F1 Pit building, the interactive event will feature educational talks from experts in the coffee industry, a local kopi showcase, craftsmanship from third wave establishments, and food from a number of cafes and restaurants. The Singapore Coffee Festival (June 9-12) is a must-attend event for everyone who knows their siphon from their chemex.

Get an invite to a secret underground dinner by And So Forth

What happens when a bunch of eclectic individuals with a passion for food get together? Lots of theatrics, but of course! In the past, And So Forth has organised secret dinners with such themes as heist, experiment and auction among others. All you have to do is book your ticket for one of their upcoming dinners through their website, and follow the clues, which you'll receive only on the day of the pop-up event. The organisers come from diverse creative fields, so expect high drama and lots of unexpected fun.
